

ENDORSEMENT STATEMENT

International Day of Family Remittances (IDFR) 2026

The Bank of Ghana is pleased to endorse the International Day of Family Remittances (IDFR) 2026 and to join the global community in raising awareness on the vital role of remittances in advancing sustainable economic growth and financial stability.

Remittances continue to serve as a critical and resilient source of external financing, supporting millions of households through improved access to education, healthcare, housing, and livelihoods. Beyond these immediate benefits, they hold significant potential to drive financial inclusion, entrepreneurship, and job creation, particularly across rural and underserved communities.

In line with this year's theme, "Remittances for Rural Resilience, Entrepreneurship and Employment," the Bank of Ghana remains committed to strengthening policies, promoting innovation in digital financial services, and deepening partnerships to enhance the efficiency, affordability, and developmental impact of remittance flows.

We also reaffirm our commitment to engaging the diaspora and fostering investment pathways that enable remittances to contribute more directly to productive sectors of the economy.

On this occasion, we recognize the invaluable contributions and sacrifices of migrants and their families.

The Bank stands ready to collaborate with global partners and all stakeholders to unlock the full potential of remittances as a catalyst for inclusive growth and shared prosperity.
